
Internship – Social Business (m/f)

Studio Nima was founded in Munich, Germany with the aim to implement social business and social innovation projects together with companies, civil society organizations and academic partners. The services are clustered in the two pillars of Ideation and Implementation and include workshops & trainings, social business concepts and business planning, as well as support with the implementation of actual social business and social innovation initiatives. Studio Nima works both locally and globally with a large network of like-minded organizations.

We are looking for an Intern as of September 2020 ideally for minimum 3 months to help setting up very-early stage social innovation projects, in particular in the field of hydroponics.

Tasks

- Technical development of prototypes, e.g. in the fields of hydroponics and/or plastic reduction
- Support the conduction of feasibility studies for the implementation of social innovations in emerging markets
- Support with the technical piloting of very early stage social innovation projects both locally and in emerging markets

Requirements

- Good understanding of the social business and social entrepreneurship field
- Knowledge and/or interest in technological innovations for development, in particular hydroponics, urban farming and circular economy
- International experience, ideally in emerging economies
- At least Bachelor's degree in (business) engineering studies
- Good desktop research skills
- Very good writing skills (English and German)
- Reliable, accurate, proactive and fun to work with
